CLINICAL SOCIOLOGY REVIEW

Volume 9, 1991

The Clinical Sociology Review is published annually by the Michigan State University Press, in association with the Sociological Practice Association, a professional organization of clinical and applied sociologists. Abstracts of all articles appear in Sociological Abstracts and selected abstracts appear in Social Work Research and Abstracts.

Clinical sociology is the creation of new systems as well as the intervention in existing systems for purposes of assessment and/or change. Clinical sociologists are humanistic scientists who are multi-disciplinary in approach. They engage in planned social change efforts by focusing on one system level (e.g., interpersonal small group, organization, community, international), but they do so from a sociological frame of reference.

Clinical Sociology Review publishes articles, essays, and research reports concerned with clinical uses of sociological theory, findings or methods, which demonstrate how clinical practice at the individual, small group, large organization or social system level contributes to the development of theory, or how theory may be used to bring about change. Articles in the Review are generally expected to be relevant to intervention at some level. Articles may also be oriented to the teaching of clinical sociology. Manuscripts will be reviewed both for merit and for relevance to the special interests of the Review.

Manuscript submissions should follow the Sociological Practice Association style guidelines, including reference citation style, and should include an abstract. There is a $15.00 processing fee which is waived for members of the Sociological Practice Association. Send four copies of the manuscript to the editor: Susan Brown Eve, University of North Texas, Denton, TX 76203; (817) 565-2663. When possible, final copies of manuscripts should be sent on a 5-1/4 inch IBM compatible disk, either in ASCII or a standard word processor text.
